

Bartosz Sołowiej, professor

Position: Vice-Rector for Science and International Cooperation

Affiliation: University of Life Sciences in Lublin, Faculty of Food Sciences and Biotechnology, Department of Animal Foods Technology, Poland

Occupation field: Food Technology and Human Nutrition

Short biography: Bartosz Sołowiej works in the Department of Animal Foods Technology of the University of Life Sciences in Lublin (ULSL), Poland. Since September 1, 2020, he has served as Vice-Rector for Science and International Cooperation at ULSL. His research interests include the use of proteins and polysaccharides to improve the functional properties of selected food products (e.g. fermented organic meat products, fermented dairy products, processed cheese, functional bars and beverages); the design of functional and health-promoting foods; rheological, antioxidant properties, water activity, and food texture.

Bartosz Solowiej is a graduate of the prestigious Top 500 Innovators program "Science. Management. Commercialization." at the University of California, Berkeley, USA. He has been the recipient of multiple research fellowships from esteemed international centers, including the University of Victoria Melbourne (Australia); University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada; Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel.