

Radmila R. Mitrovic, PhD

Research title: Research Associate/Specialist in food microbiology

Position: Department of Microbiological and Molecular-Biological Research

Affiliation: Institute of Meat Hygiene and Technology (INMES)

Occupation field: Food Safety, Food Microbiology, Hygiene and Technology

Short biography: Since 1996, she has been employed at the INMES. She completed her PhD as well as Specialist academic study in Food Microbiology at the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Belgrade.

Also, a large part of her scientific research is dedicated to the methods for detection of pathogens, risk assessment of pathogenic microorganisms which can be present in food and their control during meat processing. Additionally, part of her work is focused on implementation of the HACCP system in the food industry. She published more scientific and conference papers and she was involved in the implementation of several national and international projects.