

Katarina Breka, PhD

Research title/Position: Assistant professor

Affiliation: University of Belgrade, Faculty of Biology – Belgrade, Serbia

Occupation field: Animal ecology

Short biography: Katarina Breka holds an MSc in Ecology and Environmental Protection and a PhD in Ecology, both from the Faculty of Biology, University of Belgrade. Since 2019 she is employed at the Institute of Zoology, Faculty of Biology, University of Belgrade, within the Chair of Animal Ecology and Zoogeography. She currently holds the position of Assistant Professor.

Her research is mainly focused on animal ecology, with special emphasis on population ecology and conservation ecology. She has participated in numerous multidisciplinary teams and has been involved in several international and national research projects. She is currently a team member of the Worm Profiler project funded by the Science Fund of the Republic of Serbia.